

REBEL

RADICALS EMINENT BEYOND ELEVATED LEADERS

Radicals Eminent Beyond Elevated Leaders(REBEL) are devoted to the end of high level government surveillance on the innocent unassuming populous of the world, exist to fight this battle on many fronts we can act as lobbyist for the government or take more subversive measures. We are the here to serve as the voice of the people in every nation all around the world. The average person is now under as much scrutiny as celebrities once were. We are trying to stop surveillance of governments who try to spy on their own people with out any just cause . we are standing up for every person around the world to have a right to privacy. This high level of government paranoia has got to stop or the people of the world will never have true freedom.

The Truth About Media Drones

GEAS volunteer okmany reports from a hotel in Mendocino, California that media drones have successfully penetrated the secrete conclave of State and Federal officials who have been negotiating the terms of succession for four Western states, including California. This is the first known use of drones in political coverage. Previously, they were limited to documenting celebrity life in an age of robotic paparazzi. The governor's office was swift to respond to this most recent intrusion, demanding that drone attacks be treated as felony crimes.

Media drones are no different from the other enterprising souls who inhabit the business world: they seek powerful contacts above all else. It's therefore not very shocking that they would gladly censor themselves when it came to telling the truth about a man so crucial to their product cycle. anyone knew this it was that master of access,

Protest Against Global Surveillance

Surveillance and data retention is a problem that deserves Global attention, even for developing countries. In developing countries protests for such causes are sometimes not among the list of priorities, such as poverty, hunger and violence, which are the major concerns. Not quite. In Peru, breaking news points to surveillance coming from the government, and recently in Guatemala, the President himself was under heavy surveillance.

Mass surveillance is threatening the fabric of a democratic and open society and a healthy Internet. Mass surveillance is also endangering the work and commitment of civil society organizations - on and offline. That is why many conscious people got together last Saturday to commemorate Freedom not Fear Day, with a variety of peaceful protests: In Berlin the greatest protest march against surveillance. in Germany's history took place: Participants in the 2 km long, peaceful protest march carried signs reading "You are Germany, you are a suspect", "No Stasi 2.0 - Constitution applicable here", "Fear of Freedom?" and "Glass citizens, brittle democracy". Apart from related music tracks, loud chants of "Belittle it today, be under surveillance tomorrow" or "We are here and we are loud because they are stealing our data" could be heard. During the protests, which were supported by more than 100 civil liberties groups, professional associations, unions, political parties and other organisations, artists played parodies on surveillance society.

It all started with the opposition to a Data Retention directive in EU. Now it has evolved and become global, as expressed by the Electronic Frontier Foundation (EFF):

Freedom Not Fear has evolved into a more general warning: showing how fundamental freedoms like privacy, freedom of expression, and democratic participation lose when reactionary surveillance systems penetrate our open networks, justified by a hyperbolic rhetoric of fear.

Portrait of a R.E.B.E.L.

IN HIS WORDS

We live in a turbulent environment where we are unsure of our future. We make predictions but the climate is always changing. Strategic ambiguity is important to R.E.B.E.L. because it allows our members to maintain and protect their identities. It allows our members interpretive room to change their tasks while appearing to maintain activities crucial to our cause. This flexibility helps us to utilize structuration that enables us to live in a functional balance of creativity and constraint.

Our open communication between members is critical to the total enterprise, which is defined in systems theory, that each one of us makes up the functional whole. Our interpersonal contacts will help us to create the safeguards people need against their government as well as hackers. You should be able to enjoy new technologies without the worry of identity theft or surveillance.

Our values represent a (more or less) shared set of beliefs about the rights that each human being should share. Currently there are skewed beliefs by those in power who control and use humans of "less stature" to complete their tasks and to make them money. There is a better way. With a human relations approach we our destined for purpose driven societies, that will better the lives of all the participants. Let's call it a tribe mentality.

"People should not fear their government, government should fear their people."- V for Vendetta.

Code Name:

Clandestinus

* Where do I live?

* Who do I live with?
My wife and two kids

* What do I do? Where do you work?
I am a member of R.E.B.E.L.(Radicals-Eminent-Beyond-Elevated-Leaders) I am a Independent Sales Representative, an entrepreneur and an investor. I work from home and in the field.

* What matters to me most?
Family and friends matter most. Closes friends are few amongst the huge array of connections and acquaintances, although each and everyone hold a special place in my heart.

* How did I get to be this person?
Every person I have ever come into contact with has helped shape me into the person that I am today. I have been powerfully mentored by a few, but have been selective in what I have taken from them. I am thankful for both good and bad experiences because they have made me well rounded both on the streets and in an academic setting. I continually pursue a heightened level of consciousness. Every day I hope to be more and more self aware, and elued into the world around me, through reading, observing, and gaining more perspective from others. I love building my own philosophy on life, which is a combination of many thoughts and disciplines.

Unique Strengths

* What I know?

I like to paint with acrylic, draw, sing, stay physically active, converse with friends as well as strangers I might like to get to know, maintain a rounded lifestyle of physical, mental, social, emotional, and spiritual health. I know how to fish, hunt, construct basic dwellings.

* Who I know?

I have great social equity that increases with value through every new experience I have, whether that's work related or through time off.